As you know, the Conservative Party is committed to retaining Britain's minimum strategic nuclear deterrent.

We have said repeatedly that in an uncertain and volatile world, we believe it remains indispensable for our country's national security. As we made clear in our Green Paper on National Security published in January, and as we stated in the debate in the House of Commons in 2007, we support the decision to renew Britain's submarine-based nuclear deterrent based on the Trident missile system.

So you can be assured that, whatever Labour may claim, if a Conservative Government is elected, new submarines required for the deterrent will be built right here in Barrow-in-Furness.
